Les frères Farman (français quoique d'origine anglaise) dont le nom est synonyme d'aviation, furent tous les deux également des constructeurs d'avions.

Henri Farman (1874-1958) réussit le premier en Europe, en 1908, à Issy-les-Moulineaux, à voler en circuit aérien fermé. Puis, la même année, il effectua le premier vol avec passager et le premier vol de ville à ville entre Bouy et Reims.

Il fonda la première école de pilotage sans visibilité et l'une des premières compagnies de navigation aérienne ouvertes aux passagers (1919) ainsi qu'une entreprise de construction aéronautique.

Son frère, Maurice (1877-1964), fut également le promoteur du tourisme aérien et conçut un type d'avion biplan avec lequel Eugène Renaux put atterrir sur le Puy-de-Dôme en 1910.
